The archaeology of garbage project was conducted in 2017-18 to investigate the daily garbage of inhabitants of two districts of Tehran. Among the discarded materials, we recognized scattered evidence of prostitutes' daily life. Finding such evidence gave us an alibi to work on the historical documents in order to trace the patterns of prostitution in nineteenth-century Tehran.

Abstract: "The developmental history of most Islamic countries in the 19th century is marked by the implementation of innumerable modernization measures. The eager attempt to translate foreign ideas into the Islamic context by means of applying the already existing old expressions brought about a crisis situation which led to the evaluation of a field of discourse over modernity.
