It is not cast thy "seed" upon the waters. It is cast thy "bread" — cast of thy bread-corn, that which you might use for bread — cast that on the waters, spare even of that to sow for the days to come. You see, it is a lesson not merely of sowing, but of self-denial and self-restraint in order to sow.

Casting Bread Upon the Waters - Reformed Witness Hour

Many dark and dreary days you'll look up at the sky. And wonder where did all your sunshine go. And many long and lonely nights you'll lie and wonder why. You once had a love like mine and you let it go. And that's the bread that you cast upon the waters. Doing all the heartless things you swore you'd never do.
