Our Songs of Farewell - OCP

Saying "goodbye" and leaving isn't always easy. Sometimes it's freeing, but many times it's sad and difficult. It can be hard to find the words to express what needs to be said; often it's not enough to wish a simple farewell. But music is a language that transcends words - no wonder so many songs are about love. Music can give expression to our unspoken thoughts and emotions. In ...

our songs of hope for all eternity. As our parish community remembers our loved ones in death this year, I will hold the memory from years ago of the mother who sang her song of farewell to us on her deathbed. She still teaches me not to be shy about the truth of my own song and the melody of justice that needs to be heard in our communities.

Parry's Songs of Farewell were composed over the final decade of his life. The elegiac tone of the Songs may also reflect a sense of loss caused by the First World War - in which some of Parry's most promising students at the Royal College of Music lost their lives - and a decline in national confidence, expressed in a different manner in Parry's famous Jerusalem of 1916.
